

Maps & areas

Geography deals with areas. You can look at them from far away or close up.

You will see differences: some areas are dry and others wet. Some are rich while others are poor.

You will also look at relationships. The question here is: what is the relationship between certain areas?

You can't do without maps in geography. They tell us all kinds of things about areas: where they are and what they look like. Of course, you have to be able to read a map! That is what you will practise in this chapter.

When studying the subject matter, you can test yourself by doing the practice tests. You can find these tests under the button 'practice'.
